Trenchfoot is just good clean local multiplayer fun for up to 16 friends. If you enjoy old-school multiplayer games like Bomberman, you're going to love Trenchfoot!

Included in the current build of Trenchfoot is:

- Support for up to 16 local players
- 9 powerups and items
- Players can place blocks. Blocks add a defensive aspect to the game. Blocks will stop explosions from spreading and can be used to shape dymanic ones.
- Flood explosions, these explosions will fill the space available to them. They flood around corners, scurry through bottlenecks and expand into open spaces.
- Players place tiles during the gameplay modifying the level
- Destroyable blocks are the standard destroyable blocks players can place these. They create temporary barriers, and also continue to add powerups during gameplay.

- Water tiles are a player placeable tiles that stop explosions from spreading, but do not hinder player movement
- Pipe tiles are a player placeable tile that funnel explosions and players through them. If an explosion gets into a pipe it will be directed through it until it exits. Once it exits it will continue to expand again until its magnitude is expended.
- Smaller maps built to support as few as 2 players with larger ones available for up to 16 players.
- The game now has music! It's a sweet upbeat happy tune made by a talented artist named Nom.

Features that are partially implemented:

- Graphics and animations: The current game's graphics are a work in progress. Graphics assets are well underway but more are coming. New graphical features are being added regularly.
- Sound and music: The current game's sound effects are a work in progress but coming along well.
- More power-ups and abilities: This is where your feedback comes in, during the early access period your feedback will be needed regarding powerups and player abillities.

Trenchfoot is a local multiplayer only game. There is no single content in the game.
